
The use of Computer in Accounting Courses

Dr. Salem M. Bengharbi*

The purpose of this article which published in the Arabic section of this issue is twofold; First, to review related literature concerning the using of computer assisted instruction. Second, to suggest some application of computer in the Accounting courses in our school.

Some suggestions — concerning the computer applications in Accounting courses — are discussed by the article.

* Assistant Professor, Departement of Accounting Faculty of Economics — University of Garyounis.

It is recommended also that a computer center, as compared to some other forums of computer configuration should be choosen. One of the biggest advantages of this type of computer is to facilitate and encourage empirical and scientific research which the University has the main responsibility to fulfill.